When you want to have a great event, but you have to do it on a budget, you will want to make sure that you are finding ways to cut your expenses. There are many different things that you will have to pay for and you will want to make sure that you are able to get all that you need with the money that you have set for the party. Here are a few ideas when putting together a party on a shoestring budget.

1. The first thing that you will need to do is figure out what the maximum amount is you can spend. This is most important. However, you do not want to go too cheap if you do not have to. You want to stay on the proposed budget but not take too many shortcuts that you don't have to take.
2. The next way to cut spending is to find all the friends and family members that you can to help you out with your party. You do not want to have to hire people unless you have to. If you can save money by having volunteers help, you should take advantage of it.
3. Shop wisely. You will also want to shop around as much as you can to try to find the absolute best prices and discounts that will help you come within or under budget.
4. Get donations. If you know someone that can help you with your party, like a family member or a close friend, you should ask them for a contribution. This will give you access to more money that you need to get things done the right way. You will find that a lot of people like to help out for a good cause or because they simply like you and like what you're doing.

5. You need to find a location that will be very inexpensive or, better yet, free. You want to get a venue that is a good fit for your party, but also save you money in the long run. You'll have to check around until you find a venue that will work with you or find the price that fits your budget as well as accommodate the majority of your needs.

6. Make the food for your event if you need to have food and appetizers. You will find that you can save a lot of money for your budget when you decide to make the food. Buying or having someone cater everything for your event can sometimes be expensive. You will want to make sure that you are allowed to bring outside food into your designated venue prior to moving on this. Some venues don't allow outside food or either have a contracted caterer that you must work with. If this is the case, then you might need to consider another venue that will allow you to bring in food.

7. Advertising can take up a big part of your budget. You want to try and find inexpensive ways, such as emails and community networking websites, to get the word out. Although I wouldn't advise it, you can consider making up your own paper flyers at home on your computer to print and hand out.

8. There is nothing wrong with trying to low-ball the people you'll need to work with. You will want to try to negotiate everything from the design cost of your flyers to the cost of your DJ. This is a great way to come across unexpected savings that will further stretch your shoestring budget.
